WHAT SHALL BE DONE?

According to an advertised notice over the signature of James H.
Wodehouse, H. B. M.'s Commissioner and Consul General, "a meeting of British residents will be held to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock, in the dining room of the British Club, to take steps for a suitable commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the accession of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. . . ."

It may be rather late in the day to call a meeting for this purpose, but "Better late than never."

The Jubilee is coming. What shall we do? Various suggestions have been made at dinner tables, or at street corners, and even propositions have been ventured in one or two of the newspapers; but so far nothing has assumed definite shape.

Many of the suggestions have their points of commendation, and perhaps all of them have points to which there are objections. Some of them might be classed as extravagant, that is, costing more than the British portion of the community could be expected to contribute; while others would fall under the head of economical. Probably the most objectionable form among those suggested, is that of a denominational character. To take everybody, in it must be non-sectarian.

In order to make the whole scheme a success, it is a sine qua non that there should be a good attendance at the meeting to-morrow evening, when suggestions can be made, and such a Committee appointed as will be competent to judge which will be best to act upon.

WE ARE SAFE.

Shallow-brained and short-sighted men have talked, and newspaper editors have published, volumes of travelling about our military and naval forces. Prosy, common-place people, incapable of grasping the idea of placing a defensive battery of 81-ton guns on Diamond Head or despatching an army to conquer the United States, insolently and ignor-antly enquire, "What use have we for an army and navy? We are at peace with the world and at peace with ourselves, and why not reduce our military and naval forces to a peace footing? We have no enemies, foreign or domestic, and a standing army is a needless and criminal expense." Although the men controlling the destinies of the country, and managing its affairs with a pro-fundity of wisdom that might not be surprising as an emanation from an insane asylum, have been, most of the time, above and beyond the reach of such balderdash, it would appear that even they have at last permitted themselves to be touched by its influence, as inferred from the fact of so many distinguished officers being allowed a furlough in foreign lands.

A lieutenant-general, a quartermaster-general, and two colonels, among whom is the renowned hero of Ocean Island, are now absent from the kingdom, and cannot be recalled on short notice. This inference, however, may possibly be constructive accusation against the authorities, of indifference to the national safety, which is undesired: for it must be admitted that we have before our eyes evidences that our defences continue to absorb the earnest attention of our great men.

THE WATCH RELIEVED.

BY "NED."

Sauntering along the Esplanade last evening, after all the bustle and tumult of the day had subsided, I saw two of those military chaps coming down the lee side of Fort Street. They were rigged up in full winter regimentals, and each had a loaded rifle with fixed bayonet, and a fully charged knapsack on his back. As they saluted me in a familiar kind of way, I returned the compliment, and at the same time noticing there was something irregular in their gait, I turned on my heel and followed them down to the beach, feeling curious to find out what was their little game. Edging up to the least fence-looking one of the two, says I, "Aloha, are you going to kill anybody?" "You bet we are," says my soldier friend, "we've got a pill for that fellow that runs the Kaimiloa, and if we don't shoot him, we'll pisen him."

Fearing that these armed rascals might carry out their mad threats without any witnesses being present, I resolved to accompany them to the scene of the premeditated tragedy. After wading single file across the mud flat near the Pacific Mail wharf, we reached the Kaimiloa, finding the guard to be relieved, reclining on a soft plank in the 'tween decks, with an iron bound block for a pillow. A kick in the rear aroused the slumberer, and he arose and demanded satisfaction. Fearing that the pills intended for the skipper, might be mutually exchanged by these defenders of the flag, I stepped in and suggested another mode of settling their differences. Having heard something like a bottle rattle in the knapsack, I moved that the knapsack be opened, the corks drawn, and the King's health be drunk.

They clasped hands, and fell in with the motion as naturally as two old swipers. The sergeant of marines happened to come along at this moment, and ordered all hands on deck. "The guard obeyed orders and 'burying the hatchet' with another couple of bottles, one assumed the position of First Luff on the bridge, swearing vengeance at Grizzley if ever he dared put his foot over the gangway without touching his hat to the officer on deck.

Whilst all this little business was going on, I happened to twig the Old Man down at the boat-house with his binoculars in hand, taking in the whole situation.

Finding the beer was run out and the guard was getting sleepy I bid the boys good-night and promised to call again.
